

Northern Peru

6 Aug – 3 Sep 2011

By Helen Rijkens and Rob Gordijn (gordijnrob@gmail)

Introduction

South America was high on our wishlist of birding destinations. After some research we chose the North of Peru as our first encounter with the continent (we did have some experience with the birdspecies from previous trips to Mexico and Costa Rica).

Peru is an excellent destination for an independent birding trip (although speaking some Spanish makes it easier). Beautiful varied landscape, cheap and most important: lots of endemic species. We saw 528 species in four weeks.

Itinerary

Date	Day	Night
6/Aug	Arrival Lima 23.30	Lima (Angels Inn)

1/Sep	Relaxing @ Lima	Santa Eulalia
2/Sep	Birding Santa Eulalia	Huachupampa
3/Sep	Birding Santa Eulalia/Marcapomachocha	Plane (departure at 23:50)

Preparation/Literature

In preparing we relied heavily on tripreports by the following authors:

- Hans Mattheve [2010]
- Lieven de Temmerman [2010]
- Andrew Spencer [2009]
- Vincent van der Spek [2006]

The combination of these provides most information you need, as always lots of other tripreports were read and used in some way, www.cloudbirders.com is the place to be. As always, time is a limiting factor when establishing a travel scheme, the trip reports above provide some possible extensions (Tarapoto, Huaraz area etc.).

Transport

We used public transport where available and taxis where necessary. Only our transport for the Santa Eulalia trip was pre-arranged, the rest was arranged on the spot without problems. A basic command of Spanish is a necessity. Distances are significant, so travelling takes up quite some time.

Weather

Rather sunny throughout, but Lima and surroundings are grey this time of year, one rainy morning (Quebrada Mishquiyacu) spent at the hummingbird-feeders and one afternoon of rain we were in a bus travelling from Esperanza to Moyobamba. So almost no birding time lost. Temperature varied with elevation. We were told the east slope had been quite dry the last months and this probably caused the very low activity we experienced.

Site descriptions

What follows are the sites we visited in the order we visited them. Since it is already 2013 when finishing this report, we refer to the mentioned reports for site descriptions and only point out our experience.

Lima:

In Miraflores we stayed at the Angels Inn (12° 7'36.40"S, 77° 1'58.26"W) for two nights and it was perfectly fine. They were very helpful with arranging transport. We arrived rather late but this was no problem at all. They pointed out which bus to take in the direction of Pantannos de Villa and we asked them to arrange a taxi to take us to the right busstation for Lomas de Lachay and our early departure for the pelagic.

Pantanos:

Departed Angels Inn at 7.30AM. Took a bus there and a taxi back. First birded the trails around the HQ (12°12'38.08"S, 76°59'19.68"W) and the trail across the road to the tower.

Many-coloured Rush Tyrant and Wren-like Rushbird were easy along the trails near the HQ and Great Grebe was seen from the watchtower. A Barn Owl near the watchtower was unexpected.

We also walked down the road to the lagoon for thick-knees. Searching for the Thick-knees, we walked around the lagoon and found a couple of Peruvian Thick-knees (12°13'24.82"S, 76°59'6.32"W). Some waders were good for the triplist. We went back to Lima at 14.30. The place can easily be birded in a shorter timeframe, but we were in no hurry.

Lomas Lachay

Take a bus bound for Huacho and ask to be let off at Lomas de Lachay (11°24'37.48"S, 77°23'19.41"W). We walked the entranceway up and found Coastal Miner and Least Seedsnipe easily. Peruvians Meadowlark was common around the entrance station. Just past the entrance station we saw one Oasis hummingbird, our only hummingbird seen this day. We walked the ridge trail within the park and found several Thick-Billed Miners (11°21'17.19"S, 77°21'28.10"W), but it was rather quiet. We tried to find a path down to the second site, but in the mist it was impossible to see a proper path down.

On the way back down we found Burrowing owl and Tawny-throated dotterel along the entrance road.

There is a second site where we could not go without our own transport and thus missed Cactus canastero, Greyish miner and Raimondi Yellow-finch (although the Yellow-finch can also be seen at the first site). See map for the sites

Pelagic

Arranged through Kolibri expeditions (<http://www.kolibriexpeditions.com/>), departed from the Marina Yacht Club (12° 3'36.35"S, 77° 8'59.78"W), meeting 5 am, departed 6 am., back at around 15.00. travelled about 60km offshore (edge of continental shelf) in an open speedboat. We had a very calm day, possibly the reason why we did not see Waved Albatross. We both missed the only wedge-rumped storm petrel, but had good views of Markham's and Hornby's storm petrel (for a complete list see the annotated trip list). Peter Harrison was part of the group, good company, and was great in explaining the intricacies of Wilson Petrel taxonomy and identification.

El Molino

Bus at 02.30 AM, just before El Molino the road was blocked by a landslide. We asked around and people told us it would probably be fixed around noon, so we decided we would just find our route downslope and assumed everything was fixed when we decided to go back.

Cajamarca area

San Marcos

We missed the Great spinetail, despite extensive searching and taping. Unfortunately the earliest moment we could get here by public transport was 8:30 AM, so activity was already decreasing by then

Rio Chonta

We dipped the Comet

Cruz Conga

Found the relevant targets, including white-tailed shrike tyrant (see the report by Mattheve for the location)

Celendin – Balsas

We arranged a car (for a morning, dropping us off in Balsas) the night before and easily birded the sites and found everything easily. From Balsas we hitchhiked to Leymebamba on the back of a truck, traffic is very sparse here though.

Leymebamba area

Abro Barro Negro

In Leymebamba we arranged a taxi for the next morning at 5am to take us up to Abro Barro Negro. From there we walked and birded along the road. Traffic was very sparse so it took some time to get a lift back down.

Canyon de los Condores

We arranged the same taxi that now took us up the Canyon. Good place to do Andes birding along a dirt track. Later we heard that there was a Condor nest in the valley, but we did not see it.

Kenticafe

Nice place to enjoy several hummingbird species. Marvellous Spatuletail only showed at dusk, and it was a male with very small, growing tailfeathers...

Estancio Chillo

We made a short stop for the Koepcke's Screech owl. We found 2 birds sleeping close together in a tree.

Pomachochas area

We stayed in Pomachocas in a small hostel with restaurant along the main road. From here it was easy to take a mototaxi either to the feeders or to the beginning of the Rio Chido Trail.

Huembo feeders

We visited the feeders one afternoon. Our main target was of course the spatuletail. We had to wait for almost an hour and then one male showed at the feeder. Too bad this male was also moulting so it didn't show in full glory. We arranged with Santos to come back early at our last morning in Pomachochas. Santos didn't show up but from the road we finally able to see a male spatuletail in its full-grown plumage.

Rio Chido Trail

The trail starts a few hundred meters on the left after you entered the dirt road. The good forest is declining rapidly here; we heard quite some chainsaws on our way up. We had good views of a Pale-billed Antpitta (after patiently waiting and taping) at the small bamboo patch that is left at the end of the trail.

La Esperanza

This place is the low budget option to see the Long-whiskered Owlet: a 4 hours walk to a wooden shelter in the forest where you can spend the night and try for the owlet. A local guide is required so we arranged this upfront with Noga Shanee of the Neotropical Primate Conservation (www.neoprimate.org). It was a rough trip with a lot of mud and steep climbs. The machete our guide brought also came in handy. We had to bring our own food and water and that night the three of us cooked some spaghetti with potato, rice and onion and garlic (the only supplies available in Esperanza where we had to do the shopping). In the evening we searched for the Owlet. At some point we heard it, but after climbing some steep slopes it was not possible to get any closer. Really disappointing after putting in so much effort.

Moyobamba Area

We stayed at a cabin at Rumipata (a nice place with excellent food).

Quabrada Mishquiyacu

Next to Rumipata, Orquidario Wakanki recently buildint a birdwatching tower with many hummingbird feeders surrounding it. This was a perfect place to spend an rainy morning, with the highlight being several Rufous-crested Coquette. The trails up the Quabrada were good as well, we could not find the tyrannulet in the coffee plantations/

Morro de Calzada

Very good birding. We spent the morning in the forest walking up and down the slope of the mountain. In the afternoon we birded the scrubby area around the forest.

Aguas Verdes

After dropping our luggage at a hostel in Naranjos we birded the afternoon in Agues Verdes. We walked a trail into the white sand forest but it was very hot and quiet at this time of the time. Late afternoon we walked to the bridge, here we saw some more birds, including a couple of Torrent Ducks.

Afluente

We arrived early morning by bus at the Vulcanizadora and arranged that we could leave our luggage here. Birding can only be done along the road and by times the noise of trucks passing by was quite annoying. Birding was ok, but we did not find most of our target species.

Abra Patricia

Since we did not see the Long-whiskered Owlet at La Esperanza we decided to include a visit to the more expensive Abra Patricia lodge. The gate was closed when we arrived but after a while we were let in. It turned out we were the only visitors and normally people do not show up without a reservation. We stayed two nights and arranged a guide (Roberto) for some time including two night walks for owling. The first night we tried for the Owlet, the lodge has a territory at less than a kilometre. Very soon we had a bird responding and the next moment we were looking at a very tiny Long-whiskered Owl! The next night also a Cinnamon Screech Owl showed really well and unusual for the area we ran into several Oilbirds. During the day we saw Undulated antpitta, Ochre-fronted antpitta, Bar-winged wood wren and Royal Sunangel

Jaen – area

After some discussion the taxi driver took us to Las Juntas, the site for some Marañon specialties (according to the locals there was nothing at Las Juntas, but in the end the fact that we showed them our gps helped convincing them). From the road there was a small dirt track into the scrubby side where we found most of the target species.

Chamaya

The site for Little Inca Finch on the way back from Jaen. We spent less an hour here since the finch was easily found.

Olmos – area

Quebrada Limon

In the morning we asked the only taxi that was waiting at the main road to take us to the Quebrada Limon (the spot for the White-winged Guans). The taxi driver had never been there and was not keen on taking us the x kilometres on the sandy dirtroad. I did bring us however and we arranged that for some more money he would pick us up at 4 PM, but he never showed up. After seeing the Guans and some more birds we walked back along the dirt track and then were able to get a lift from a local lorry (we were very lucky since traffic was very sparse).

Abra Porculla

We took the bus here from Olmos. It was nice walk along the dirt road starting at the small village (Limon de Porculla). The best birding areas were at the curves where there was still good vegetation left.

Rafaan

We took a bus from Chiclayo and did the last bit by mototaxi. Area with scattered bushes in the semi-desert. We found the Plantcutter and Rufous Flycatcher but had no luck with the Band-winged Nightjar (although we tried hard).

Santa Eulalia/Marcapomachocha

We arranged this trip in advance with Lucho Nunez (samano@hotmail.com). He picked us up in Miraflores on the evening of the 1st and drove us to a hotel in the lower Eulalia valley. Lucho knows all the sites (and we did not have much exact information beforehand. First stop was for Great Inca-finch (11°44'20.30"S, 76°36'55.32"W), and the second stop for Rufous-breasted warbling finch (11°43'56.55"S, 76°35'10.15"W), these were the main targets for the day. We spent the rest of the morning walking/birding some of the roads between these to spots and found another warbling finch and some other goodies. Then we fixed our rooms for the nights and spent some time higher up near a site for Andean Condor. The following morning we drove up to a polyepsis patch and spent quite a bit of time searching for a White-eared cotinga which did not show. Then we started driving up and birding en route with some stops (including some lakes and strolling through spiny grass for Junin Canastero 11°34'8.42"S, 76°20'51.73"W). Then we arrived at the site for the White-bellied cinclodes. It did cost us some time searching through the bogs, but we eventually found the White-bellied Cinclodes (11°33'39.29"S, 76°16'30.60"W) and a bit further along the Diademed plover (11°34'49.73"S, 76°15'50.04"W). What an amazing day to end our trip, great birds but great surroundings as well. Can't wait to return to Peru!
